

Even HM The Queen is into flexible working

Paul Winter

The Queen's Speech revealed Government plans to extend the right to request flexible working.

The introduction of an extensive and well thought through flexible working programme is a good opportunity to review what your people do, how they do it and where they do it

A request from a working parent for flexible working ;to personally pick the kids up from school can halve stress levels at home.

This and other changes in workstyle give employers the opportunity to improve the productivity and effectiveness of their workplaces and workforce.

Please call me or email me if you would like to talk about how these benefits can be realised for your company.